}); }; Q: How to flush cookie data while redirecting in node.js In my node.js app, I'm using express.js and the session middleware (to send token to backend). I need to maintain state while I redirect the user to another page. So when the user hits the login page, the server will generate a session variable that should be there while the user is on the login page and when the user successfully logs in, it will redirect the user to another page using window.location. The problem is that the cookie data still retains the variable from the previous page. Here's my login function: function login() { var email = document.getElementById('user-email').value; var password = document.getEle mentById('user-password').value; // 50b96ab0b6

If you want to make this for two, multiply the ingredients by 2. Rinse salad bowls and place them in a large mixing bowl. Add orange sections and walnuts, dressing on one side of salad and Italian dressing on the other. Toss contents of salad until well mixed. Let sit until time for serving. When ready to serve, slice the rest of the orange into very thin slices. Arrange evenly on top of salad. Serve with a small container of sparkling cider. Variations: Spinach or other salad greens can be substituted for this salad. If you are using spinach, separate the leaves and dry them thoroughly in a salad spinner. To make this a complete meal, simply add a piece of french bread. We love it. We love it. We love it. The original recipe for this was written by a friend of a friend of ours. We met her husband at one of our former jobs. He was a lawyer and she was a flight attendant. Having worked together for years, she had access to all of the best recipes. We made this recipe at our wedding reception in 2004. We loved it. This is so simple yet tastes great. We loved it. We would love it. Our next wedding reception is in two years and we are going to try this at it. We will make enough for our family and we will freeze some to enjoy. I made this for a dinner party for two -- an adult and a little baby
